Guangling New Town

The design of this new area in Guanling is based on the concept of single amorphous buildings which build together a harmonious city complex. The many qualities of the project is the integration of an artificial lakeside area in the south of the area. The development of height enable visual connections to the water over the hole area. The mix of work, living and shopping in combination with education, leisure and relaxation opportunities as well as temporary living in sky scraper contribute to a vitalisation of the hole area.
